President's Message

Charles W. Pfister, M.D.

It is increasingly evident that divergent points of view can cause irritation, friction, and intense disagreements. We are all indeed seeking and striving for a common goal but should recognize that the attainment of this goal is approached by many devious avenues by the various segments of the Christian community.

Dissent can be helpful if it is used as a key to open honest understanding among all peoples. I think it is a mistake that evidence of dissent either falls into a void, or is ignored.

Now is the time to expend energy and to explore avenues of mutual concern, education, and philosophy. This is also the time to open discussions at all levels, individual to individual, and group to group.
