olic position. This is, in fact, the stance taken by the editorial board of the Linacre Quarterly.
Again we urge each of you to take a lively interest and an active participation in our Federation's annual meeting by sending in your comments or suggestions for the proposed program.
In conclusion I wish to reiterate my thanks for the many heartening communications which I have been receiving as President and I solicit your continued support and prayers. Thank you.

EDITORIAL BOARD OF ADVISORS

The Linacre Quarterly proudly introduces its new editorial advisory board - thirteen distinguished members whose talents and expertise will be placed at the service of the journal. As reported earlier, the National Federation Board of Directors last June approved a resolution aimed at broadening the scope of the Linacre to make it more effective in matters of medical morality. To implement this goal, it was decided to assemble an editorial advisory board of competent ethicists, physicians, theologians and other experts from a broad range of disciplines and religious backgrounds.

To list all the achievements, honors and publications of this outstanding group would be to fill this issue. The following is a mere hint of the versatile ability that Linacre now counts among its most valuable assets.

The members of the editorial advisory board are:

JOHN G. BOUTSElis, M.D.:
Dr. Boutselis is a professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Ohio State University, College of Medicine. He is a member of the board of directors of the Human Life Foundation. He received his medical education at St. Louis and Ohio State universities and has held teaching appointments in the obstetrics and gynecology department of the Ohio State medical college since 1957. He has written extensively on matters relating to his field and has also participated in many professional events. Dr. Boutselis has been awarded six research grants.

REVEREND CHARLES PATRICK CARROLL: A priest of the Episcopal Diocese of California, Father Carroll recently completed a year's residence as a Fellow of the Institute for Ecumenical and Cultural Research at St. John's Abbey and University, Collegeville, Minn. At present he is living in Skowhegan, Maine, in order to have access to the resources of the International Legal Center at the Harvard Law School. His studies, lectures, and writings focus on the ethical implications of advances in the life sciences. Besides a number of church positions, Father Carroll has experience in government, teaching, advertising and editorial work. His educational background includes study at Yale, Harvard, the University of Berlin, Union Theological Seminary and Church Divinity School of the Pacific.
REVEREND JOHN R. CONNERY, S.J.: A professor of moral theology at the Bellarmine School of Theology, Chicago, is currently on a sabbatical leave at the Kennedy Center for Bioethics, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C. Father Connery began teaching at Bellarmine School of Theology in 1948 and served as provincial superior of the Chicago province of the Society of Jesus from 1960 to 1967. He has published a number of articles relating to moral theology.

REVEREND CHARLES E. CURRAN: Father Curran is a professor of moral theology at the Catholic University of America. He is a former president of both the American Society of Christian Ethics and the Catholic Theological Society of America and was a senior research scholar at the Kennedy Center for Bioethics in 1972. That same year he was the first recipient of the John Courtney Murray Award of the Catholic Theological Society of America. His books are Christian Morality Today, A New Look at Christian Morality, Contemporary Problems in Moral Theology, Catholic Moral Theology in Dialogue, and Crisis in Priestly Ministry, and he has co-authored and edited other works.

ARTHUR JAMES DYCK, Ph.D.: Dr. Dyck is the Mary B. Samenstall Professor of Population Ethics at the Harvard School of Public Health. A Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Kansas where he earned master's degrees in psychology and philosophy, he received his doctorate in religious ethics from Harvard in 1966. Before attaining his present position, he was an assistant professor of social ethics at the Harvard Divinity School and a member of the Harvard Center for Population Studies. A native of Saskatchewan, Dr. Dyck has an impressive bibliography on subjects relating to population and medical ethics. Works in progress include An Ethical Analysis of Population Ethics, Moral Requiredness and Prescriptive Rights and Population Policy.

JAMES M. GUSTAFSON: Dr. Gustafson holds the special rank of University Professor at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago. Prior to his appointment in 1972, he was a professor of religious studies at Yale University. An expert in theological and social ethics, Dr. Gustafson is the author of Treasures in Earthen Vessels, Christ and the Moral Life, and The Church as Moral Decision Maker. He also edited On Being Responsible: Issues in Personal Ethics and co-authored Advance- ment of Theological Education, an outgrowth of a study on theological education in America in which Dr. Gustafson served as assistant director.

DAVID W. LOUISELL: Professor Louisell is the Elizabeth Josselyn Boalt Professor of Law at the University of California Law School, Berkeley. He has been a law professor at the University since 1956 and was awarded the Boalt chair in 1964. Members of the legal profession are familiar with Professor Louisell through his long list of books and articles. They may also identify him with three United States Supreme Court decisions, involving the right to counsel, immigration, and immunity of congressmen for floor speeches. Born in Duluth, Minnesota, Professor Louisell received his law degree from the University of Minnesota and practiced law in New York and Washington, D.C. He returned to his alma mater as a professor in 1950-56 and again as the Visiting Distinguished Alumni Professor of Law in 1971-72. His books include Trial of Medical Malpractice Cases and The Parenchyma of Law, both written with H. Williams, M.D.

REVEREND PAUL E. MCKEEVER, S.T.D.: Although Father McKeever is the editor of The Long Island Catholic, his publications have not been limited to his own paper. Father McKeever is a former president of the Catholic Theological Society of America and has taught theology at the university, graduate school and seminary levels. A Brooklyn native, he was ordained in 1948 and studied at the Catholic University of America and the Gregorian University in Rome, receiving his doctorate in 1954. Besides his editorial, teaching and writing duties, he has participated in diocesan affairs.

RICHARD ARTHUR MCCORMICK, S.J.: A professor of moral theology at the Bellarmine School of Theology in Chicago, Father McCormick has been teaching Christian morals to Jesuit seminarians since 1957. The past president of the Catholic Theological Society, he is a recipient of the society's Cardinal Spellman Award. He serves as an associate editor of America and as a general editor (along with James Gustafson and Paul Ramsey) of Studies in Christian Ethics. He has published widely in publications as diverse as Theological Studies and Sports Illustrated. A Toledo, Ohio, native,
Father McCormick entered the Society of Jesus in 1940, received his master’s degree from Loyola University in Chicago and his doctorate in theology from the Gregorian University in Rome in 1957. In 1972, he was a senior research scholar at the Kennedy Center for Bioethics. His father, Dr. Edward J. McCormick, is a past president of the American Medical Association.

PAUL RAMSEY, Ph.D:
 Ramsey is the Harrington Spence Professor of Religion at Princeton University. He has occupied the Spence chair since 1977 and has been a faculty member since 1944, including a stint as department chairman. Well known for his work in Christian ethics and social theory, he has written or edited several books and many articles on religious and philosophical topics, among them Fabricated Man: The Ethics of Genetic Control and The Patient as Person: Explorations in Medical Ethics. He edited Religion, ninth in the series, Humanistic Scholarship in America: The Princeton Studies. As a McCoish Faculty Fellow in 1964, Dr. Ramsey researched the Christian interpretation of sex and marriage; earlier, as a Senior Fellow in the Council of the Humanities, he had done research of a related nature. A Mississippi native, Dr. Ramsey received his doctorate from the Yale University Divinity School in 1943. He has taught or lectured at many educational institutions, holds a number of editorial positions, and has been president of the American Society of Christian Ethics and the American Theological Society. The recipient of many honors, he was elected to membership in the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences in 1972.

RABBI SEYMOUR SIEGEL:
 Rabbi Siegel is a professor of theology at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in New York, where he has been a faculty member since 1952. He also occupies the Young Men’s Philanthropic League Chair in Ethics and Rabbinic Thought and is assistant dean of the Herbert H. Lehman Institute of Ethics. He has been a visiting professor at the Seminario Rabínico Latino Americano in Buenos Aires, at Carleton College in Minnesota and at the College of the City of New York. Born in Chicago, Rabbi Siegel studied at the University of Chicago and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America where he earned the degree, Doctor of Hebrew Literature, in 1958. He also studied at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and at Oxford University. A work in progress is titled A Faithful Passion, A Theology of Judaism.

LEROY WALTERS, Ph.D: Dr. Walters is the director of the Kennedy Center for Bioethics, Georgetown University, a post he has held since 1971. Previously he served as the co-ordinator of the East-West Conferences, Mennonite Central Committee, West Berlin, and was a teaching fellow in religious ethics at Yale. Born in Sterling, Illinois, Dr. Walters earned a B.D. degree from the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Elkhart, Indiana, and attended the University of Heidelberg and the Free University of Berlin, receiving his doctorate in religious studies from Yale University. Honors include the Theron Rockwell Field Prize from Yale and the Scholar’s Award from the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., Foundation. He is currently at work on a book, Five Classic Just-War Theories: A Study in the Thought of Thomas Aquinas, Victoría, Suarez, Gentili, and Grotius.
